

Cinderella

Once upon a time, there was a kind and beautiful girl named Cinderella. She lived with her wicked stepmother and two stepsisters who treated her like a servant. Despite her hardships, Cinderella remained gentle and kind-hearted.

One day, the King announced a royal ball for his son, the Prince, to find a bride. Cinderella longed to go, but her stepmother refused and left her behind. As she cried, her Fairy Godmother appeared and magically transformed a pumpkin into a carriage, mice into horses, and her rags into a sparkling gown. She also gave Cinderella glass slippers, warning her that the magic would end at midnight.

At the ball, everyone admired Cinderella's beauty, including the Prince, who danced only with her. But when the clock struck twelve, she ran away, leaving behind one glass slipper. The Prince searched the entire kingdom for the girl whose foot fit the slipper.

When he arrived at Cinderella's home, her stepsisters tried to fit the shoe but failed. When Cinderella tried it, it fit perfectly. The Prince recognized her, and they were married, living happily ever after.
